

Three papers on jurisdictional arbitrage this quarter. Not one author has ever opened an entity outside their home country.

Once "jurisdiction is alpha" becomes a shared framework, everyone downloads the same checklist: treaty network, withholding rate, incorporation speed, sanctions exposure.

The paper reader asks which jurisdiction has the best tax treaty. The operating GP asks which local counsel picks up the phone at midnight when a filing bounces.

The paper reader models withholding tax on a spreadsheet. The operating GP has already eaten a real withholding surprise, on a real wire, with an LP watching.

Running capital across Korea, Japan, and North America, the edge was never the arbitrage table. It was the scar tissue from getting it wrong once and fixing it before the LP noticed.

The phrase was never wrong. It was just never anyone's to name. Once it's said on a panel, the edge has moved somewhere the paper can't reach.
