When a big round is announced, I skip the commentary on model, market, and moat. I read the cap table first: who led, and who wrote the last check.

Early on, the company sets the price and capital follows. Late, the capital sets the price and the company grows into it, or doesn't.

A fund that must deploy a very large sum can't buy 2% of a small company. It needs a company priced so its check fits.

Better question than "is it justified by revenue multiples?": what kind of capital is this price built to absorb?
